ARTILLERY DUELS OPEN BATTLE FOR EGYPT

BATTLE groups of the British Eighth Army yesterday dispersed several small enemy columns. Apart from this, activity on land was restricted to artillery duels, which probably presaged a renewed attempt at a break-through by either side. Both armies were apparently trying to blast anti-tank and other opposition out of the way. Berlin spoke of British counter-attacks, supported by tanks, which, it claimed, were all repulsed.

Reuter's Military Correspondent says that Marshal Rommel now has the choice of making another effort to smash through at El Alamein or remaining on the defensive while the Allies attack, and Allied pressure may eventually make it necessary for him to fall back to shorten his already greatly extended lines of communication.—(Reuter.)

CAIRO, Tuesday.—Reuter's correspondent here writes:—"The next big clash in Egypt is likely to be just as fluid as the earlier engagements, as both Marshal Rommel's Afrika Korps and the 8th Army remain highly mobile. Despite the withdrawal of his right flank, there is no sign that the enemy is digging in on any considerable scale. The withdrawal, it seems likely, was prompted by nervousness about the possibility of a sudden British move from the direction of the Quattara depression in the south."

Reuter's correspondent at El Alamein states:—"There has been no material change in the situation during the last 24 hours, which have been marked by constant heavy artillery duels and frequent R.A.F. raids on Axis concentrations south-west of this point. Allied mobile columns, which yesterday tried to get round Marshal Rommel's flank and behind him, stopped when they found themselves faced with strong forces. Marshal Rommel has evidently decided on a certain regrouping of his forces, having been stopped from penetrating the Allied positions and gaining the high ridge commanding the El Alamein box.

"A wall of armour and guns still stands in his way, while the forces inland are probing his flanks and rear, but he has shown no signs of withdrawing. The German Panzer divisions are not believed to have received any tank replacements yet, but it seems certain that the Italian Littoria armoured divisions possess some new heavy tanks. With British armoured strength still growing and vigorous offensive local actions being taken by various brigades, the tide still appears on the turn, but has not yet gathered any speed; but Marshal Rommel has plenty of kick left."

BERLIN, Tuesday.—Military circles expressed surprise to-night at the "more confident" British reports of the fighting at El Alamein, says the German News Agency. "Marshal Rommel had often paused in his offensive when his opponents least expected it—only to advance just as surprisingly. He is a master in disguising his intentions, and the British have often been deceived by him," the Agency adds.—(Reuter.)

AXIS REPORTS

LONDON, Tuesday Night.—The battle continues in the region of El Alamein, and British counter-attacks were repelled with heavy losses, said German Radio to-night. These counter-attacks, the Italian News Agency says, were defensive in character. The agency claimed that the breach opened in the British lines had been considerably widened.—(Reuter.)

GERMANS CLAIM FALL OF VORONEZH

RUSSIANS ADVANCING AT KUPYANSK

MOSCOW reports an "exceptionally grave" situation west of Voronezh, while the Germans claim to have taken this exceedingly important town, 130 miles east of Kursk, on the Moscow-Rostov Railway.

Thrusting north-east from Byelgorod, a panzer force is trying to break through Soviet units holding the Stary Oskol positions, 80 miles east-south-east of Kursk.

A Vichy report states that Marshal Timoshenko is advancing rapidly towards Kupyansk and Izyum, and that German forces in that sector have been ordered to retreat.

Other reports indicate the growing liveliness of the front north-west of Moscow, where counter-attacks, says Moscow radio, have checked a German advance in the vicinity of Rzhev, 130 miles from the Soviet capital.—(Reuter.)

"DON SITUATION GRAVE"

BERLIN, Tuesday.—The German News Agency to-night reports the capture of Voronezh, announced in an official communiqué earlier, and says that German troops successfully continue their advance. A further bridgehead was established across the River Don. "The Luftwaffe," it says, "supported the Army in the capture of Voronezh. While waves of bombers attacked the town, the armament works and the railway works, German fighters dominated the air, and destroyed over 100 'planes in air combats."—(Reuter.)

MOSCOW, Tuesday.—Reuter's Correspondent here says:—Red Star to-day described the situation on the River Don as exceptionally grave. Latest reports reaching Moscow spoke of huge concentrations of German tanks in ravines running down to the river and on the river bank itself waiting for an attempt to cross. Soviet aeroplanes were constantly subjecting these tanks and accompanying infantry to mass raids. Under cover of artillery and air bombardments the Germans were trying to repair dynamited bridges and throw pontoons across the river, staking everything on forcing their way eastwards through a gap made in the Soviet defences.

Fighting is growing in intensity every hour. The air above the battle was rent with the sound of screaming shells. Soviet bombers dived low at German sappers. Advanced German parties were attempting to make a crossing on flat-bottomed boats and rafts. In one place the Germans succeeded in getting forty tanks and ten lorry-loads of infantry across, but these were destroyed by the Russian troops on the eastern bank.

ONLY DELAYED

"Soviet air reconnaissance disclosed that the Germans were preparing a large-scale crossing simultaneously at several points. The Russians succeeded in delaying, but not in halting, the German advance, which had as its immediate objective a large town controlling important road communications, possession of which would protect the flank of the main German forces. The Germans were, at the same time, trying to widen their salient to the river by pushing forward on other sectors still some distance away, where Red Star described the position of some Russian units as very unprofitable. North-west of Moscow, in Kalinin province, where the Germans have been attacking in some force since Friday, Soviet reconnaissance has spotted long columns of German tanks and infantry reserves moving towards the battle line. Soviet troops are energetically counter-attacking in repeated efforts to retake villages lost over the week-end.

"The Germans are making great use of smokescreens, behind which tanks and infantry deploy and creep up to the Soviet lines. In one engagement seven German tanks and two battalions advancing in this way were driven back, leaving 400 dead. Elsewhere a village was recaptured and the Germans forced to the defensive. It is evident that the German Command intend to keep up this pressure, and fighting has now spread to new sectors."—(Reuter.)

COUNTER-OFFENSIVE

VICHY, Tuesday.—Marshal Timoshenko has launched a violent counter-offensive in the Kupyansk-Izyum area, south of the main Voronezh battlefield, according to a front despatch to the Vichy News Agency. The Germans are reported to have been driven back across the Krasnaya river, and their High Command, which disposes of relatively weak forces in this sector, is stated to have ordered advanced units to retreat. The Russians are advancing rapidly, the despatch adds. The Agency also states that the Red Army has struck again at Taganrog, on the Azov sea coast, where in very violent battles the Germans are stated to be holding their lines.—(Reuter.)

In one sector of the Rzhev front Soviet troops counter-attacked, checked the German advance, and captured three villages, said Moscow Radio to-night. About three infantry battalions were routed in this action. In another battle a fourth battalion was also routed. The Germans were flung back to their initial positions in an area where over 1,300 Germans have been wiped out in various engagements.—(Reuter.)

Marshal Von Bock has lost several hundred tanks, over a hundred guns and many thousands of men on the Voronezh-Stary-Oskol front in the past two days, says Izvestia's correspondent. Fighting is going on day and night. West of Voronezh the Germans reached the eastern bank of a river, but were flung back as the result of a counter-attack by Soviet tanks, Izvestia adds.

The correspondent adds: "Having driven a wedge into our positions by strong tank blows on a comparatively narrow sector, the enemy is endeavouring to widen the gap. Besides tanks, the enemy is using large forces of artillery and infantry, but the main work is being done by tanks and aircraft."—(Reuter.)

SOVIET COMMUNIQUE

MOSCOW, Tuesday. — To-night's Soviet midnight communiqué says:—"During July 7 fierce fighting continued west of Voronezh and south-west of Stary Oskol. No material changes on other sectors. South-west of Stary Oskol heavy fighting is in progress against enemy infantry and tanks. On one sector the Germans attacked with about 200 tanks and a considerable infantry force. Soviet gunners disabled 80 enemy tanks. Enormous losses were also suffered by enemy infantry. Red Army men fired at Germans at close range, and, having wiped out several hundreds of the enemy, our troops withdrew to new defence positions, which had been previously prepared.

"As the result of the fighting the enemy lost in one day 700 killed, 14 tanks, six anti-tank guns, seven lorries, and two mortar batteries. On another sector our artillery and infantry have for two days been defending an inhabited locality against superior enemy forces. On the approaches to the village the enemy has lost over 1,000 officers and men in killed alone.

"Our gunners on the Kalinin front repelled seven enemy attacks, in which the enemy's losses are estimated to have exceeded one battalion. Our troops on the Leningrad front in two days destroyed eight enemy blockhouses, and the enemy suffered about 200 casualties."—(Reuter.)

"MUST FACE THE REALITIES"

THE Minister for Industry and Commerce (Mr. Lemass), who is also Minister for Supplies, replying, in the Dail yesterday, to the resumed debate on the estimate for his Department, attacked deputies who had criticised his statements made when reviewing the supply position.

If there was any safety for them in the present situation, he said, or any way out for the nation, it was in facing the realities, and not attempting to humbug themselves or the people. Anyone who had studied the position would have to admit that this country had suffered less from the hardships arising out of universal war than any other country in Europe. They had much to be thankful for, although the position was deteriorating, and would continue to deteriorate.

On the question of bargaining with Britain, the Minister said they had been told, officially and unofficially, that the inability of the British Government to give this country more coal was caused by the fact that they had not got it.

The Minister was replying to deputies who had raised matters relating to post-war economy, coal, artificial manures, rail transport, etc. The Dail could assume, he said, that the matter of planning for the post-war situation had received very careful and continuous consideration from the Government. The question of post-war planning could be divided into two parts. Firstly, there was the question of organisation. Consideration had to be undertaken in the light of the fact that the circumstances which would prevail after the war were unknown, and also the fact that the report of the Vocational Commission was likely to appear soon. If they were to consider now the matter of post-war planning they could not leave out the existence of the Vocational Commission or the fact that this report was now being prepared. Their industrial development programme had been all too inadequate to give this country the economic security it should have to tide it over a period of emergency caused either by a physical war or an economic or financial upheaval. They could list now the industries which they should establish as soon as circumstances admitted it.

"I cannot say that plans for these industries have been brought to a point that immediate action can be taken when the war ends," he continued. "It had been the policy of the Government to promote private enterprise, and, consequently, the first step must be to interest private persons in their possibilities. We can, however, decide that the various projects are practicable, and we can also decide that we are going to encourage and facilitate these plans."

PREPARING PLANS

The establishment of a factory for the manufacture of nitrogeneous fertilisers was possible in this country, but before the war the equipment cost three-quarters of a million. They were on the point of making arrangements with the Skoda Works, when the Germans occupied Czecho-Slovakia. There was not the slightest possibility of getting the equipment anywhere in the world which would be required for that purpose. The manufacture of such fertilisers was on the list for post-war development.

"Every Department of the Government," stressed Mr. Lemass, "has been instructed to prepare plans for development of one kind or another, but I think it is foolish to suggest that there is any course of action open to us now that would permit of any employment-giving activities."

The Government were not facing with equanimity the migration of so many of their people to find work in another country. The question was: What were they going to do about it? They must open every avenue of employment at home, but turf and agricultural production, at its fullest, would not give employment to all, nor would it give work to their skilled workers. These were problems the Government were trying to think out. They had laid down a general policy for emigration, and details of that had been published again and again. He had invited deputies to suggest a solution, but no concrete suggestion or plan had been put forward. It might be that the emigration would weaken their national position, but were they to deprive these men of the opportunity of earning a livelihood, not only for themselves abroad, but for their dependents in this country?

Referring to refusal to grant licences for export of machinery, raised by General Mulcahy, the Minister said that the Government was trying to keep in this country any machinery they had so that it would be available in the post-war period. They knew that if surplus machinery were exported now it would be impossible to get replacement at the end of the war.

COAL OUTPUT

The Government had been criticised unfairly about coal development work, but they had started the Slieveardagh Company and the Mineral Exploration and Development Company. At Slieveardagh unforeseen difficulties had been encountered. He had asked that company to investigate the possibility of further development of the Rossmore coalfield. In the Arigna area the output had been increased to 80,000 tons a year, which was a hundred per cent. increase on 1939 figures.

Generally, said the Minister, the total output of the Irish coal mines was only about one-tenth of their requirements. The mineral resources would be better if developed by private enterprise, but in the existing circumstances the Government had gone ahead with the two companies mentioned, and these were proceeding to develop mineral resources which are too speculative for private enterprises.

He appreciated the obligation the Dail had to the seamen who were manning its ships, but he felt that they had discharged that obligation when they gave them the same treatment as was given to British seamen sailing British ships, even though Britain was a belligerent. Irish seamen were compensated on exactly the same basis as British seamen.

At present they had control over railway transport just as adequate as would be given to them by any system of nationalisation. They determined the precedence to be given to different kinds of transport, and they had appointed a chairman to run the company. It might be that, in the post-emergency period, they would have to consider even the question of transport policy, but the policy at the moment was to deal with the emergency.

It was practically certain that extending control over all systems of public transport would be necessary to deal with their problems, and to ensure that the public had adequate transport facilities.

There had been criticism of the taking of the trams off the roads, but, if the trams had remained, there now would be no tram service at all. The existing services were being carried on only with the use of parts taken from the dismantled trams. In addition, the drain on electricity was so great that it was causing them grave concern, so much so that restrictions on the hours of running would have to be made in the near future. There was the same difficulty in procuring the necessary metals and equipment for the Drumm battery.

BARGAINING

In regard to bargaining with Britain, the facts were that the British Minister of Agriculture had imposed restrictions on the export of store cattle from this country. There was no surplus in Great Britain of materials that this country was short of—coal, steel, and other things. The stocks of those goods in Great Britain were urgently required for the war effort, and they were not prepared to give them to this country merely to get supplies of food. The British never had suggested that they were prepared to barter pit-props for coal. They had been told, officially and unofficially, that the inability of the British Government to give this country more coal was caused by the fact that they had not got it. His Department, in the last twelve months, had done its best in very difficult circumstances. Representatives had been sent from this country to the International Labour Conference in New York in order to maintain formal contact with the Association. They had a watching brief only.

The motion to refer back the estimate for the Department of Industry and Commerce was defeated without a vote, and the estimate was passed.

POST-WAR ECONOMY

During the debate GENERAL MULCAHY [F.G.] said that when the Minister for Supplies stated that they had no bargaining power with Britain it seemed to him that, not only were they throwing in the sponge in regard to economic development here, but also getting into the wrong frame of mind in relation to the spirit in which international co-operation and agreement should be reached. If this country was not completely blinded by political prejudice it must be realised that its post-war economy must fit in with Britain's. If the farmers could not get a living out of post-war agriculture there would be no living in the towns. There was no evidence of any technical improvement in agricultural methods which would suggest preparations for post-war conditions.

Mr. P. BELTON (Ind.) wanted to know if anything had been done to secure an exchange of timber for British coal. Within the past week the E.S.B. had refused him electric current to milk his cows. On Saturday last he was told he would have to cut his electric power by half because of coal shortage. Had nothing been done to provide coal for industrial purposes? If the Minister was a prudent businessman, he would have negotiated with the British to get coal, and offered them everything we had. The British needed pit-props, and we had plenty of them.

Mr. W. NORTON (Lab., Carlow-Kildare) said that the only way in which they could obtain available coal deposits was by the State doing for coal-mining what it had had to do for the development of the Shannon Scheme. Asking about the Drumm battery, he said that the one train running from the termini in this city which did not give any trouble was the Drumm train, and he hoped that the Drumm battery would be further exploited.

WASTE PAPER SALVAGE

QUESTION RAISED IN DAIL

The question of newsprint and waste paper was raised in the Dail yesterday on the debate on the estimate for the Department of Industry and Commerce.

Mr. E. BENSON (F.G., Dublin Township) said that a greater effort should be made to salve waste paper. The system of leaving its collection almost entirely to waste paper merchants, who were interested in it commercially, was wrong. It was not economic for them to go from house to house collecting small quantities, and he suggested that the Minister should make it obligatory on householders to place their bundles of waste paper separately with their refuse bins to be collected by the Corporation and given to the paper merchants. There must be considerable waste of paper in the sending out of forms in separate envelopes month after month from Government departments, and it should be possible to find a method by which saving could be carried out.

NEWSPRINT

Mr. P. COGAN (Ind., Wicklow) asked why more progress had not been made in supplying their needs of newsprint, and suggested that there were substitutes, other than straw. He also suggested that there should be intensive research to find out whether there were no additional materials from which paper could be manufactured.

A dépot for the salvage of waste paper had been suggested by provincial newspaper-owners, said Alderman CORISH (Lab.), and one would have thought the Minister would have agreed to that.

Mr. LEMASS—And so I did. They formed a company among themselves, and it has been functioning for some time.

CARLOW YOUTH SHOT

Joseph Walsh (18), labourer, Fenagh, Co. Carlow, now lies in a Dublin hospital, to which he had been brought from the County Infirmary, Carlow, suffering from gunshot wounds in the leg and shoulder, received in the early hours of yesterday morning.

MORE IRISH SMOKES

TOBACCO GROWERS' AIM

TO contribute about 240,000lb. of tobacco—100,000lb. more than last year—to the 10,000,000lb. annually consumed in this country is the aim of Irish tobacco-growers this year. It now is virtually certain to be achieved.

They have nearly doubled their numbers in the last twelve months, and have increased the tobacco-growing area by 100 per cent. The majority of those who took up the crop this year, either for the return it produces or because of the shortage of tobacco, grew the smallest economic unit—a half-acre—and, while the days of £300 an acre for duty-less tobacco are finished, they will turn over at the rate of from £170 to £190 an acre for good leaf. Last year they received 16.21d. per lb., an increase of 3d. on the 1940 rate, owing to the rise in transport charges causing higher values on the American market, from which all tobacco in this country takes its costs. This year the price is likely to be at least as high, if not greater. In addition, the bonus of 10d. per lb. has been advanced to 1s. 1d. per lb., 7½d. going to the grower and 5½d. to the re-handler.

HOME-GROWN HELPS

Irish tobacco has been helping smokers over the emergency scarcity during the last few months, and will continue the good work next year. The majority of them are unaware of the fact that our own crop is going into the common pool of American supplies, which last March were only sufficient for eight months. With the aid of Irish tobacco, and small quantities of foreign leaf imported during the year, manufacturers have been able almost to meet normal demands.

With duty at the rate of 18/- a lb., the importance of the smoker from the viewpoint of the National Exchequer must be assessed at nearly £9,000,000 a year, or £9 per person for every one of a million smokers. A very considerable increase in the tobacco habit in the last few years, due mainly to the participation of women and the growing popularity of cigarettes, has produced a tendency towards a greater consumption of a milder tobacco than our forefathers enjoyed. It has been contended that the expansion in the number of smokers has brought about a decline in the consumption of alcohol, and has helped to create a more temperate people.

RYE IN BRITISH BREAD

Mr. R. S. Hudson, British Minister of Agriculture, told the Council of Agriculture in London yesterday:—"We shall be very lucky, having regard to shipping, if we get through the next two years of war with only putting rye in our bread."

The Duke of Norfolk, Joint Parliamentary Secretary, Ministry of Agriculture, had announced that it was possible that some rye flour might be included in the national flour. The Government, he said, wanted to encourage the growing of rye, and in the coming season growers would be required to offer for sale all their rye, except what they required for seed and 10 per cent. tailings for feed stock.

A resolution was adopted assuring the Ministry of the hearty co-operation of the farming community in attaining its 1942-'43 programme.

TRADE UNION LAWS

NEW AMENDMENT BILL

IMPORTANT amendments are shortly to be made to the Trade Union Act. The first of these concerns the right of appeal of a person refused admission to a union. The second provides for certain alterations, which will be more favourable to the unions, in the provisions of Section Three of the Act, which governs the setting-up of what the trade unions call "company unions"—or unions established exclusively within the framework of any one company.

The Irish Times learns that Mr. Sean Lemass, Minister for Industry and Commerce, has "undertaken" to have the latter alterations made, and was himself concerned about the question of the right of appeal of those refused admission to unions. Speaking in the Dail on last Friday, the Minister foreshadowed the amendments, and stated that they would be "based on representations by the trade unions." The representations referred to by Mr. Lemass were made recently by a deputation representing the Council of Irish Unions. They are said to be mainly the interest of the crafts.

REFUSING ADMISSION

Section Three of the Trade Union Act provides that a person refused admission to a union has the right of appeal only to the Circuit Court, and the decision of that Court is final. Citing a case to the Irish Times last night, a prominent trade union official said that in Dublin, where there was only one bricklayers' union and one plasterers' union, a fully competent workman coming up from the country might be refused admission to the union, and could not work without his card. "And his appeal to the Circuit Courts, also," said the official, "would most likely be refused."

The aim of the unions is the setting-up of a Special Committee within the unions themselves to deal with such appeals. Also in Section Three of the Act, where objection was taken by the unions to the "company unions," the Minister undertook to have certain alterations made, which will be more favourable to the unions, and which will still preserve the right of large firms—such as Guinness's Brewery—to have unions within themselves.

SEVEN YEARS IN SLIGO CASE

Joseph McSharry, Kinlough, Co. Leitrim, a Sligo Mental Hospital attendant, was found guilty at the Central Criminal Court, Dublin, yesterday on the charge of causing harm with intent to murder Edward Gallagher, also an hospital attendant, by striking him on the head with a hammer on February 25th last.

He was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude from the date of his conviction.

The hearing lasted six days, and was the second trial, the jury having disagreed on the former occasion.

In passing sentence, Mr. Justice Maguire said he did not think the jury could have arrived at any other conclusion.

An application for leave to appeal was refused.

This concluded the Central Criminal Court sittings.

BELFAST REFORM BILL

COUNCIL TO CONTINUE

BY 23 votes to 10 the Northern Ireland House of Commons at a late sitting last night passed the second reading of the Belfast Administration Bill.

Those who voted against the bill included Messrs. Dowling, Gamble, Warnock, and Colonel Gordon, members of the official Unionist Party. Mr. Dowling is a member of the Corporation.

Mr. W. Lowry, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for Home Affairs, was the chief spokesman for the Government. He said that the Bill did not wipe out the City Council. It did not take away the rights and dignity of the Council and it did not mean that the administrators could transfer the municipal gas, electricity and transport undertakings. When the Bill became law there would still be ample scope for useful work for the Corporation, and it was believed that when the heavy work of administration was transferred to other shoulders, far more men of public spirit would be prepared to serve on the Council.

The Rev. R. Moore said that such a controversial measure should not be persevered with in the present emergency. There was no doubt whatever that the bill would create a certain amount of dissatisfaction and division among the people of Belfast.

Mr. Warnock said that he regretted he did not leave the Government when the Belfast Board of Guardians was dissolved. He maintained that there was more damage to democratic institutions in the bill than in any other measure he had seen introduced in any part of the British Commonwealth.

IRISH GIRL FOUND DEAD

MAY HAVE BEEN SHOT

Glasgow C.I.D. officers last night were sifting clues collected during 36 hours' investigation into the mystery of the death of a twenty-year-old girl near a West of Scotland town. The girl, Gertrude Cummins, was Irish. She had been missing for six days, when her body was found on Sunday night. The police are not excluding the possibility that she had been shot. The girl was due to report for duty a week ago last night. When she did not appear a search was started, as certain circumstances aroused suspicion.

GERMAN SPIES EXECUTED

ONE BRITISH; OTHER BELGIAN

Secret writing material, including crystals to make invisible ink, were found on one of two German secret agents who were hanged at Wandsworth Prison yesterday. The men were Jose Estella Key (34), a British subject, and Alphons Louis Eugene Timmerman (37), a Belgian, who, stated the Home Office, besides offending British laws, was a traitor to his own country.

Both spies were tried in camera at the Old Bailey under the Treachery Act, convicted, and sentenced to death.

Key spied on British forces in and around Gibraltar, where he was born, and when arrested was in possession of information he was intending to send to the enemy. Timmerman, who was born at Ostend, came to Britain last autumn, posing as a refugee. His real mission was to find out naval and military secrets. He had secret writing material, special stationery, and a large sum of money.

The trials took place before Mr. Justice Humphreys and a jury—that of Keys on May 15 and 18 and that of Timmerman on May 20, says the British Home Office statement. Appeals by both prisoners were dismissed.

TWENTY-NINE SHIPS SUNK

GERMAN ATTACK REPORT

A United States heavy cruiser and 28 merchant ships were sunk in an attack on an Allied convoy for Russia, it was claimed in a Berlin statement yesterday. "The remainder of the convoy dispersed and is being further attacked," it was stated. "Seaplanes rescued a large number of American seamen, who were taken prisoners." The convoy "consisted of 38 ships, laden with 'planes, tanks and food, escorted by strong naval forces."

The German News Agency reported that the British and American Navies had given the convoy the strongest escort ever employed—many cruisers, destroyers, corvettes, aircraft carriers, and a strong fleet of battleships. In all, according to German Radio, 37 Allied ships were sunk in the 24 hours ended at 3 p.m. yesterday. They included a Soviet submarine and a Soviet submarine chaser.—(Reuter and Associated Press.)

Research . . .

Raleigh wasted no time; day in, day out, he filled 'the unforgiving minute with sixty seconds' worth of distance run.'

Diligently, in an improvised laboratory aboard his ship, he turned his enforced leisure to research.

The Raleigh organisation of today perpetuates that industrious and worthy example.

Research has led the van of Raleigh progress, has maintained and will continue to maintain the Raleigh Cycle's enviable pride of place.

A GREAT CRICKET CUP FINAL

By P. D. MacWEENEY.

Transport difficulties are reacting in favour of organised sport in Dublin, and this has been especially noticeable in cricket. Attendances at Senior League and cup matches have been far larger this season than for years past, and the teams have justified this increased public interest by providing the most entertaining play possible.

The Phœnix win over Leinster in the cup semi-final was intensely exciting, but, even though the margin on that occasion was smaller it did not contain more changes of fortune than the closing stages of the final on Monday evening.

The match deserves description in detail. A morning start on Saturday seemed to afford a reasonable chance of Trinity and Phœnix finishing the game in one day, since it allowed of nearly seven hours' play. Up to lunch time there was every possibility of a Trinity collapse. The loss of E. A. Carry to the very first ball—he was l.b.w. in trying to turn a perfectly straight yorker to leg—was a severe blow. W. J. Moynan and J. V. Luce made a gallant stand for the second wicket. Luce being shaky and Moynan sound, but the latter was out at 50 to a fine catch at point by Quinlan. Shrago never settled down and both he and Luce were out with the score just over the hundred mark. Then came one of the decisive phases of the game

AN IMPORTANT STAND.

With W. S. Jameson and S. Barnes together for the fifth wicket, 99 runs were added. An arm injury prevented Jameson from attacking the bowling in his customary manner, and he was content to defend, while his partner picked the ball to hit. After Jameson had gone the back of the Phœnix attack was broken and Hill, Morton and Hool all got useful runs, but Barnes was the main factor in the total of 286. Although he holds a considerable batting reputation in Ulster he has seldom made runs for Trinity but he surpassed himself in successive weeks against Phœnix with scores of 68 and 83.

After doing a lot of work in the Phœnix attack, D. R. Pigot gave a proof of his stamina by going in to open the batting and knocking up 74 in quick time, and that, in addition to his four wickets, made him one of the outstanding men of the match. After the opening stand had produced 53, Boucher was out; thirty runs later F. Quinn was dismissed. G. Quinn left at 102. Pigot at 132, and, very important for Trinity, McVeagh hit his wicket a few minutes before the close with the score at 156.

When play was resumed on Monday evening, the odds were on Trinity. Phœnix had to make 143, and they had their last two reliable batsmen, P. Quinn and C. V. O'Carroll, at the wicket. How dangerous these two could be was quickly shown. So far from being worried at the critical position, they settled down right away, and even though O'Connell played a few streaky shots, the Trinity attack was completely mastered. When the score had reached 229, the game seemed to be over, for Quinn and O'Connell were quite capable of knocking off the remaining 58 runs.

A TRAGIC ERROR.

Then came the third and final phase of this extraordinary match. Quinn hit the ball to mid-off and called, but Luce had his return back to Moynan like a flash, and O'Connell was well out. In the following over, P. Quinn placed another shot towards Luce, and the quick run seemed definitely there, but K. Quinn was slow to start, and by failing to ground his bat as he completed his run lost his wicket.

That was the final blow, for P. Quinn never really settled down again. B. Quinn was well beaten and bowled by Barnes 11 runs later, and then Fleming, who had missed P. Quinn in the slips, held him in really amazing fashion two balls later. When Tyrrell hit his wicket playing back to Hill the game was over—it will be recalled as one of the best of all Senior Cup finals.

KENNY BEATS EGAN AT FITZWILLIAM

Playing splendid tennis under difficult conditions, at Fitzwilliam yesterday, F. Kenny defeated R. F. Egan, champion in 1940, in the third round of the Irish Open Singles Championship. Kenny was hitting the ball very confidently off the ground, and, in a close struggle all the way, was keeping a better length and getting more pace on his shots. A former boy champion, Kenny has played for Mount Temple in the inter-club competition, but so far this season has not been showing especially good form. On this occasion, however, he struck his best and, with Egan content for the most part to defend, Kenny increased the tempo of his game in the final set, ending the match with a service ace.

H. J. Ryan faced defeat when he lost the first set to R. G. Brown, the hero of Clontarf's inter-club triumph last Saturday. Brown held the games to 4-all in the second set, but, once Ryan had captured the next two games the match took a complete change. Getting acute angles on his shots, Ryan also produced a deadly drop shot to take the final set comfortably. The holders of the Women's Doubles Championships for the last two years, Mrs. P. J. Egan and Miss N. Stoker, went down in the straight sets to the Lansdowne number one pair, Miss Lombard and Miss Poole. Results:—

LUMBERING IN WICKLOW

FUEL FROM NOTED GLEN

By a Staff Reporter.

A THOUSAND tons of oak, ash, laurel and alder came out of the Glen o' the Downs, one of Wicklow's most popular "beauty spots," last year, and this year several hundred tons more will go to Dublin's hearths.

In the July sun about a dozen men are sawing, swinging axes, pulling and hauling logs on to the temporary road-ways and loading them on to lorries. Cords of oak, ash and laurel, which, with beech, are the best burning timbers we have, line the path that leads from the Dublin-Wicklow road through the glen to Delgany golf course. Stacked in the neat two-ton piles, each four by four by eight feet, the timber will be taken by Fuel Importers, Ltd., for cutting into blocks and distribution to merchants and householders in the city.

The felling is being done by the Forestry Division of the Department of Lands, who are keeping in mind the scenic beauty of the glen, and avoiding the felling of large areas of trees. The glen always has been one of the favourite spots for Dublin people, and it is even more visited now that the distances possible to travel for picnic parties and out-of-door pleasure are so limited

Despite the thousand tons that came out of the glen last year, its appearance has not changed, and its steep sides seem from the road to be as thickly wooded as ever.

This year the trees on the floor of the glen, on the left side of the road, are being thinned, and a better view of the valley bottom can be got. Formerly the trees were so close and the foliage so thick that nothing but a wall of leaves was visible. In the spaces left by the clearance young trees, probably ash or beech, will be sown later this year.

The long spell of dry weather has taken much of the hardship out of the work, for in wet weather the floor of the Glen is largely a swamp, and, early this year, men working in rubber leg-boots, sometimes left a boot behind when stepping across a bad spot. The bread shortage was added to the natural disadvantages of the task, and it became very difficult to keep men on the job. They often can get higher wages than the Forestry Division pays by going to fuel contractors, and the forester in charge often finds that over a week-end his gang has fallen from a dozen to seven or eight, with no explanations given.

Even in good weather the job is tough. "There's a heck of a lot of mulin' in this job," said the man at one end of a cross-cut saw. The "muling" could hardly be better described. The sides of the glen are very steep and the men must scale them, select their trees, saw them, trim them, and send them rolling down the slopes to the road or path. Once trimmed the logs come down the sheer hill like thunderbolts, and a man stationed on the road warns traffic. The trees are cut into four-foot lengths, which makes it possible to build them into cord size heaps on the road or pathside, as well as to load them into cart or lorry for transport. Transport difficulties are increasing, and sometimes it has been necessary to take the logs th eshort distance to Greystones by road and transfer them to rail wagons in preference to taking them straight into Dublin by road.

Most of the men on the job are natives of the Newtownmountkennedy district, and have been working with timber all their lives. They work hard, know timber and will talk shop all day long. They take a midday meal round a camp fire among the trees, and then the job seems not so bad.

BRILLIANT GOLF BY PAUL MURRAY

The main feature of the third round of the John Lumsden Memorial Cup at Milltown last evening was the 5 and 3 victory of the Milltown captain, Paul Murray, over Desmond Purcell, winner of the tournament in 1940. He played remarkably fine golf after a bad second hole. There he picked up, but on the sixteen other holes he had thirteen bogies, and three "dykes." H. G. Moore, another local player, put up a great game against the Royal Dublin pensman, John McLoughlin, a former holder (1929). There was never more than a hole between them, and they went to the 19th. There Moore drove into the bunker, pitched beautifully out, and holed the putt for 3 and the match. B. F. Smyth, who beat R. J. Wallace, 6 and 5, lost a ball at the second, despite which he was level fours when he won at the 13th.

THIRD ROUND.

D. P. Murphy beat A. O'Malley, 3 and 2; H. G. Moore beat J. F. McLoughlin, at 19th; J. A. Kelly beat J. English, 5 and 4; A. J. O'Meara beat H. B. Linehan, 2 and 1; K. Duggan w.o., D. W. Wheeler scr.; J. N. McAuley beat R. R. Cruise, 2 and 1; W. S. Bates beat C. M. Burke, 2 up; J. G. Clarke beat R. E. Davitt, 1 up; L. Howley w.o., S. B. Jones scr.; R. H. Ryan beat A. Goodridge, 5 and 3; G. H. Owens beat J. O'Reilly, 4 and 3; E. O'Sullivan beat F. Clarke 2 up; H. M. Stanley beat M. Campbell, 3 and 2; J. O'Reilly beat W. A. Bermingham, 2 and 1; J. G. Barnewell beat C. F. Myerscough, 2 and 1; K. Doyle beat M. J. O'Dwyer, at 19th; E. F. Kilduff beat G. Mahony, 2 and 1; E. A. Browett beat S. H. Seymour, 2 and 1; P. Mulcahy beat H. Keogh, 6 and 5; B. D. Fleming beat J. McCullagh, 2 and 1; T. P. Ryan beat J. Byrne, 2 and 1; J. M. Howard beat P. A. Love, 1 up; J. S. Wall beat F. M. Burke, 1 up; B. F. Smyth beat R. J. Wallace, 6 and 5; J. F. Long beat T. P. Hogan, 3 and 2; H. Williams beat D. H. Meredith, 2 up; F. J. Roche beat D. J. O'Connor, 3 and 2; H. O. Stanley beat L. "Andrews," 6 and 4; P. F. Murray beat T. D. Purcell, 5 and 4; D. V. Horgan beat B. R. Smith, 6 and 5; G. Davis beat L. V. Ryan, at 19th.

First match at 5 o'clock to-day.

BIG HURLING TEST AT CORK

(By PAT'O.)

With Kilkenny out of the 1942 running, Cork and Tipperary hurlers are fighting for leadership in the list of titles won. They are level at twelve each, and next Sunday's Munster final at Cork carries high values, for it is felt in hurling circles that the victors will capture this year's All-Ireland. Despite travelling difficulties, Cork Park's capacity will be fully taxed; record influx of cyclists is certain. All manner of vehicles have been requisitioned, and Saturday morning's train from Kingsbridge will carry a heavy load.

Confidence is expressed in my latest news from the Cork and Tipperary camps. Both teams have trained steadily, and there is little between them. Cork have named twenty players, from which fifteen will be selected; Tipperary line-out will not be decided before Sunday. Most likely three changes will be made in either side as compared with their last appearance.

GOALKEEPER RETAINED.

Potter, a great success on his first test, is retained in the Cork goal, with Thornhill, of Buttevant, to guard him. Two Murphys—Liam and Con—will fill the wing back positions, with D. J. Buckley, Cottrill, and Jim Young making a formidable half-back line. John Lynch, the Cork captain, may be partnered by O'Donovan at midfield, and the six forwards may read: Ring, Kennefick, Condon; Quirke, O'Sullivan and Derry Beckett. This is a formidable side of fast hitters, who know every blade of grass in the Park.

Yet Tipperary have played their best championship games on this pitch and their 1942 side carries abundant confidence. Framed from the successful Boherlahan side, every position has been carefully examined, and Willie O'Donnell's men will not lack capable generalship at either side of the touch-line.

Captain Jim Cooney, of the Army Engineers, is back at his best, and will be the ideal partner for O'Connell at centrefield—both are six feet tall, of firm build. They are master hurlers. Ger. Cornally, of Thurles, returns to his old place as full back. He may have Hayes and Coffey on either flank, with John Ryan, Maher and Loughlane making up the half lines. Tipperary's attack is not yet decided, but Doyle, Treacy and Flanagan are all hurling on the top of their form. Nial Condon, of Ballingarry, is worth his place, and Tipperary have a dozen fit men to fill any vacancies.

The teams are level in height and weight. Cork are slightly younger, and their speedy hitting may prevail if the sod plays fast. Tipperary followers will welcome some rain. A lucky goal either way may decide. The winners play Galway, and Dublin are awaiting the victors for the September final at Croke Park.

WINDSOR SLIPPER NOT FOR ENGLAND

Mr. Joe McGrath informed us yesterday that there was no truth in the statement that permission had been granted by the Jockey Club for Windsor Slipper to run in the Champion Stakes at Newmarket. Mr. McGrath would be very glad if th. could run in the race and have a chance of opposing such other cracks as Watling Street, Big Game and Hyperides; but, though he tried to get permission from the Jockey Club, such would not be granted.

DEATH OF MR. J. QUILLIGAN

The death occurred recently of Mr. Jack Quilligan, who for the past five years was the Munster representative on the selection committee of the Irish Rugby Union. In his younger days he played for Garryowen and for Munster, and also in Irish trial games.

FEWER COUPONS

THE Minister for Supplies has announced further changes in the coupon values for certain articles of clothing. Full details are given in official advertisements.

A special reduction has been made for the period from the 8th July to the 6th August, 1942, for women's and girls' fashioned frocks or dresses made of cotton or linen, which are suitable only for summer wear. These garments may now be obtained for the same number of coupons as if they were made of artificial silk—i.e., 2 for the adult's size and 1 for the girl's size.

The coupon values for men's suits have been reduced to 35 coupons for a 3-piece suit, and other articles of men's outerwear are reduced proportionately. The coupon values for women's costumes have been reduced to 23 and for women's fully lined coats to 25, certain other articles of women's outerwear being reduced proportionately.

A special reduction has also been made in the case of garments made of fur. A lady's fur coat, fully lined, now requires only 12 coupons. Coupons for other fur garments have also been reduced.

Ties, gloves, collars and cuffs for ladies' frocks and infants' bonnets and hats have been exempted from rationing.

Men's, women's and infants' cardigans, made wholly or mainly of artificial silk, are the subject of a special reduction in coupon values for the period up to the 30th September, 1942.

It is further announced that only a cardigan suit or jumper suit, made of knitted fabric or knitted, netted or crochetted, can be sold under reference No. B19 in the clothes rationing schedule. Revised coupon values have been fixed for this category. Costumes made of woven material must be sold under B18 (costumes, jackets and skirts), for which revised values also have been fixed.

HOSPITALS' FINANCE

DEFICIT PROBLEM

Co-ordination of Dublin hospital activities is likely to be one of the results of the financial crisis which has arisen following the declaration of the Minister for Local Government and Public Health that the Government cannot allow the dissipation of Hospitals' Trust funds in maintenance charges.

There has been no immediate development following the decision of the Department to limit its sanction to only two-thirds of the 1941 deficits of the hospitals, but it is believed that the situation will bring hospitals' committees and boards together in conference within the next two months to examine ways and means of reducing the margin between income and expenditure on maintenance. One of the schemes likely to be considered would be a joint purchasing plan, which would enable a rationalisation of hospital costs.

Deficits have soared so high during the last two or three years that they threaten to eat up the income derived from the Trust Fund, and the Minister for Local Government has suggested an energetic effort to develop voluntary support.

FARMERS DISSATISFIED

Dissatisfaction with cattle, wool and grain prices is expressed by the National Executive, Irish Farmers' Federation, in a letter to Dr. J. Ryan, Minister for Agriculture. The letter makes the following points:—

FANCY BREAD (PRICES) ORDER, 1942.

The Minister for Supplies has made the above-mentioned Order under the Bread (Regulation of Prices) Act, 1936.

The Order fixes the weight and price at which any bread may be sold or offered for sale. As and from the 13th instant it must be sold in units of less than 8 ozs. or in units of 1lb. or multiples of 1lb., and when sold in units of 1lb. or multiples of 1lb. the maximum prices must not exceed:—

3d. per lb. if sold retail in a shop owned by the baker, delivery being taken by the purchaser at such shop.

3½d. per lb. in the case of all other retail sales.

Fancy bread for the purposes of the Order means all bread except batch bread or the brands known as "Hofda," "Proces," and "Bermaline."

Post-War Planning

Mr. Sean Lemass, who might be described without offence as the Pooh-Bah of the Irish Government, spoke in Dail Eireann yesterday in his capacity as Minister for Industry and Commerce, out of earshot, as it were, of the Minister for Supplies. Yet, in one or two instances, he did refer to the supplies problem, and was no more hopeful than he has been when speaking in his second capacity. Apparently, there is no prospect of a bargain with Great Britain. The Minister for Industry and Commerce did not go so far as his colleague for Supplies, who told the Dail recently that this country had "nothing to bargain with"; but he did say that the British had no exportable surplus of any of the commodities of which Eire was short. There never had been a proposal by the British to exchange coal for pit-props; they had imposed restrictions on the supply of cattle from this country, and altogether the position in respect of imports had deteriorated, and was likely to deteriorate even further. Mr. Lemass made it clear that the entire problem of Irish economy must be revised, not alone in order to meet war conditions, but with a view to conditions after the war. Manifestly, the good old days of virtually unrestricted exports and the establishment of large credit balances in London are gone for ever. Henceforward, the Irish people must rely in the first instance upon their own resources, and all post-war planning must be based upon this fact. At the moment the outlook is so obscure that any attempt at detailed planning would be impossible; but the Minister declared that the Government was giving much thought to the matter, and that, when the report of the Vocational Commission should have been received, exhaustive plans would be made for the future. All the departments of State have been instructed to prepare programmes of one kind or another, with particular reference to certain industries that should be established as soon as circumstances should become more favourable. The Minister spoke in particular of the manufacture of nitrogenous fertilisers, the lack of which during the last couple of years has proved to be such a hardship on the Irish farmers. Such an industry could be set up in Ireland. At pre-war rates, its establishment would have cost about three-quarters of a million pounds; and the Irish Government had been in negotiation with the Skoda works at Pilsen, when the Germans invaded Czecho-Slovakia and put an end to the project. For the duration of the war there was no hope of the necessary equipment; but afterwards the industry probably would be established.

Obviously, while the policy of reliance on our own resources must form the basis of all post-war planning, Ireland in the future as in the past, must be able to export her surplus of live-stock and agricultural produce in order that she may be able to purchase from abroad certain commodities which she cannot produce herself. Fuel is a notable case in point. Petrol, fuel oil, and lubricants must be imported if Ireland is not to fall back into seventeenth-century conditions. At the moment the position is sufficiently grave. Mr. Lemass told the Dail that the Government was doing its best to develop native coal resources, but, at the very best, the production of Irish coal would not satisfy more than one-tenth of the people's needs. The Government also had assumed a substantial measure of control over the railways, which gave it just as much power as it would have under a scheme of nationalisation. In the city of Dublin efforts were being made to maintain transport services at the highest possible level of efficiency; but the consumption of electric current was causing much concern. Import difficulties were preventing the extended use of the Drumm battery services; and it was more than likely that further restrictions would have to be imposed on the hours of running of public transport. So long as the war continues little can be done. The Irish people must make up their minds that conditions will become considerably worse during the next twelve months, and they must make their plans accordingly. After the war an extensive trade agreement with Great Britain will be absolutely essential. Otherwise unemployment in this country will create an insoluble problem. Mr. Lemass said yesterday that the Government was permitting emigration to Great Britain because it had no alternative. Agriculture and turf-cutting were not sufficient to absorb all the available labour in the country, and, although the Government regarded the exodus of man-power with disquiet, it really had no choice in the matter. Mutatis mutandis, this condition of affairs will persist after the war. Without the background of a sound policy of agricultural exports all Mr. Lemass's industrial planning will be fruitless. Prices may not be so big as those to which the Irish farmer has been accustomed; but he also must cut his coat according to his cloth. Mr. Lemass spoke wisely when he said that facts must be faced, and that there must be no more self-deception in this country. We all have lived too long in a fools' paradise, and it has taken a world war to awaken us to a sense of reality.

Backyard Poultry

Few actions of the British Ministry of Food have provoked so much hostile criticism as the recent order restricting "backyard" poultry. Owing to the difficulty of obtaining feeding-stuffs, it has been considered necessary to impose severe restrictions on the small poultry-keeper, with the result that anybody owning less than twelve hens will be obliged to dispose of the majority of them. Many of the comments in letters to the daily press seem to come from authoritative sources, and carry considerable weight. It is suggested, for example, that it is an anomaly that rations of hen-food should not be issued when dogs are still unrestricted, and their food does not come under the "points" scheme. Racehorses also are allotted their quota of grain. In this case it is clear that the intention of he authorities is to enable breeders to keep a quantity of stock, which will be a valuable national asset after the war. The same consideration, however, prevails in the case of poultry; and it is well argued that a great numbers of the keepers of pedigree fowl will fall into the class of "small poultry-keepers," and will not be able to keep their stock. More immediate is the consideration of the food-value lost. Several million poultry will be wined out, with a consequent decrease in the number of eggs available. Frequently the eggs are an important item in the diet of the country folk, who have not the same opportunity as the townspeople to secure extra supplies of meat; and in some cases the "backyard" poultry-keeper relies on his few hens not only for a part of his food, but for an important contribution to his income. There is little opposition to the order that domestic poultry-keepers must surrender their registration for shell-eggs; but it is manifestly unfair that they may keep one hen for every registration surrendered, and no more. The inclusion of hen-food under the "points" scheme is advocated in the case of the additional hens. Few householders would object to sacrifice their opportunities to buy canned breakfast-meats if they were thereby enabled to retain more hens and keep the valuable food for their own families. There is little doubt that the position in regard to feeding-stuffs is extremely serious; but beans, acorns and other foods might be cultivated or gathered to supplement the supplies. Sunflower seed from Russia, also, was introduced to ease the situation; but critics claim that no effective steps were taken to "push" the sunflowers, and that, in fact, the leaflet of instructions for cultivation of the plants was not issued until two months after the latest date for setting the seeds. Lord Woolton's obvious satisfaction at his success in importing dried eggs will, perhaps, be marred by the bitter criticism which his order has aroused. Whether it will persuade him, like another Minister known to us, to go back on his decision remains to be seen.

DATE OF LOCAL ELECTIONS

The Local Government elections will be held as near to August 15th next as possible—probably on Wednesday and Thursday, August 12th and 13th.

The Minister for Local Government, Mr. Sean MacEntee, announced this in the Dail last night, when he introduced the Committee stage of the Local Election (Amendment) Bill, 1942. If it is impossible to hold the elections on these dates, they will, in all probability, be held the following week, he added.

Protesting that the country did not want an election, Alderman A. Byrne asked why paper, which could be given to the newspapers, was being used in an election which was "just a try-out for Parliamentary elections." "Is this talk about paper being held from the newspapers just talk, or is it being done deliberately as a try-out for a Parliamentary election at another time?" he queried, adding that the Minister should make a statement about the matter.

The Dail adjourned until 3 o'clock to-day.

CRUISKEEN LAWN

By MYLES NA gCOPALEEN

THE other day I wanted to make a trip to the south, and arrived at Kingsbridge to find the train stuffed to the luggage-racks with—well, what do you think, cliché-fan? "Perspiring humanity," of course. I was told there was no room for me. Perhaps it was injudicious, but I rang up the authorities and asked could I, as an old steam man, be permitted to travel on the plate, offering to fire as far as Mallow, or take over the regulator when and if required. The refusal I received was, clichély-speaking, blunt. After making this call I noticed a queer change coming over the station staff I could hear phrases like the following being bandied around (and that's a nice occupation, bandying phrases):

Your man is here.

The boss says your man is to be watched

Don't let your man near the engine.

Your man'll do something to this train if we aren't careful.

There'll be a desperate row if your man is let up on the engine.

Your man ought to be heaved out of here, he'll do something before he goes and get somebody sacked over it.

Don't let your man near the sheds.

I did manage to get a look at the job they had harnessed for the run. There was any amount of evidence of "foaming." Your men do not seem to realise that if water is carried into the cylinder with the steam, you get a sharp loss of superheat as well as damage to the piston valve liners. This, of course, is due to the use of feed water that is "dirty" in the chemical sense. What was wanted here was a good boiler washout and the use of some modern castor oil emulsion preparation to reduce the concentration of solids and suspended matter in the f.w. I know I might as well be talking to the wall, of course.

I have received for review, by the way, a copy of The Steam Boiler Year Book and Manual for 1942 (London: Paul Elek, 20s. net). It contains a wealth of useful lore relating to combustion, water circulation, transmission, and so on. A copy should be in the home of every Irish boiler-house superintendent.

For Your Cliché Album

In what can no man tell the future has for us?

Store.

With what do certain belligerents make their military dispositions?

Typical Teutonic thoroughness*.

In what manner do wishful thinkers imagine that the war will be over this year?

Fondly.

Take the word, "relegate." To what must a person be relegated?

That obscurity from which he should never have been permitted to emerge.

What may one do with a guess, provided one is permitted?

Hazard.

And what is comment?

Superfluous.

This is True

Two American military gentlemen in Glasgow were standing on a bridge that spans the Clyde. Barrage balloons by the hundred glistened in the sky. They were gazing disconsolately into the water and one was heard to say:

Listen, Al, do you know what I'd like to do? I'd cut every god-darned balloon cable and let this —— place sink.

"Could we call those famous motor roads "typical Teutonic thoroughfares?"

BOMBS RAINED ON MALTA

ROME, Tuesday.—Axis air operations against Malta have intensified during the past few days, says a Special Correspondent of the Italian News Agency, who claims that the island has been cut off from reinforcements. "Italian and German bombers and dive-bombers are showering high explosive and incendiary bombs on Malta by day and night," he says. "Last night German 'planes attacked aerodromes and port installations on the island, starting many fires and causing damage. The Royal Air Force are maintaining their night fighter patrols. 'Planes escorting the Axis bombers are frequently involved in dog-fights," said the correspondent.—(Reuter.)

A CHANCE FOR ROTARY

The task awaiting Rotary after the war was referred to by Mr. G. F. Brewitt, President, Cork Incorporated Chamber of Commerce and Shipping, when he took office as President of Cork Rotary Club yesterday. "We may think the only thing international to-day is the war," he said; "but when peace comes there will be a lot of misunderstanding to be cleared up, broken bonds to be re-united, friendships to be re-established, and there will be a great chance for the International Committee of Rotary to prove its effectiveness."

Old precious things

To many of the finest products of man's craft down the centuries, age confers distinction and beauty. For example the remarkable workmanship and excellent design of an eighteenth century chair, such as that of the poet Goldsmith shown above.

What is true of furniture is equally true of whisky. PADDY to-day as in the past is a fine spirit, mellowed and ripened and brought to full maturity by long years spent in the wood.

You will enjoy PADDY and appreciate it for what it is—a grand old pot still Irish whisky of unchanging purity.
